Houses Now

Material Style
Nestled into the landscape, Star House—a single residence with two bungalows and a boathouse—blends with the natural topography of the coastline of Kuwait and slowly unfolds itself to the visitor as it is approached from the desert. Its seamless integration with the environment is characteristic of designs by AGi architects—a pale colour palette, simple lines, modern features, and a focus on necessity rather than surplus differentiates this seaside residence from the rest.
On the ground floor, the house extends into the landscape and the sea. This is accentuated by a large infinity pool in the garden. The private side of Star House is concealed from visitors by a bamboo wall; bedrooms and living areas also remain isolated from daily activities. An impressive three-way staircase placed at the centre of building helps organise the traffic flows of family, friends and guests.